Geriatric meets Wound care - what is different in the elderly

When not only the tissue is fragile...

Geriatric meets Wound: What is different in the elderly, what can we do in the treatment of chronic wounds?

The healing of chronic wounds in the elderly is made difficult by age-related physiological aspects. These include chronic diseases, malnutrition, imbalance in the immune system, reduced resistance to stress factors etc. The transitions between curative and palliative wound treatment are often fluid.

Inhalte:

- Knowledge about age-related changes and their influence on wound healing
- Skin changes in old age
- Differentiation and recognition of geriatrically relevant skin changes and chronic wounds e.g. Decubitus, Ulcus cruris, diabetic foot syndrome, Marjolin's ulcer, tumor wounds, postoperative wounds
- Discussion of interdisciplinary treatment strategies

The events are each with 8 recertification points from the ICW/TÜV certification body recognized (s. Registernummer).
